Winnipeg RV - There are several important things which a prospective buyer must realize regarding RVs in order to make an informed purchase. It is vital to know the classification of the recreational vehicle, regardless of if the buyer is purchasing a new RV or used RV. The recreational Vehicle Industry Association states that an RV is a "motorized or towable vehicle which combines transportation and temporary living quarters for camping, travel and recreation." Car dealers usually do not sell recreational vehicles. They leave this to specialty dealers called RV dealers.

There are two major types of recreational vehicles: motorized and towable. A motorized RV, also known as a motorhome, combines transportation with living quarters. These range from van campers to luxury motorhomes. Depending on the size of the motorhome, the amenities, storage space and sleep capacities would all vary. For the most part, a motorized RV will be much more expensive compared to a towable recreational vehicle. However, it has a huge advantage in that there is no need to have another vehicle for towing.

Towable RVs come in several varieties such as truck campers, conventional travel trailers, sport utility RVs and fifth-wheel travel trailers. The size, capacity and price of these models vary depending on the design, however conventional travel trailers are normally the largest. The majority of these vehicles require a pickup truck to tow. Truck campers can just be mounted on the back of a pickup.

Both types of Rvs are available for purchase both used and old. One deciding factor might be whether or not you have a vehicle that is capable of towing an RV. Some individuals prefer to spend a little bit more money to own a motorized RV for the sole purpose of traveling. Other factors that must be considered are sleeping and storage capacities, along with certain desirable features like storage, kitchens and baths. Prominently displayed on the outside of each recreational vehicle is an RVIA seal, certifying that it was made by an RVIA member manufacturer. If the recreational vehicle does not have this particular seal, the buyer should think twice prior to purchasing. Another vital factor is the weight limit of the RV.

The prospective RV buyer must have the following questions answered before buying an RV, like: how often would the recreational vehicle be utilized, what would the vehicle be utilized for, what will be taken on trips, and the number of people utilizing it on a regular basis. Attending an RV show is an excellent idea for first time buyers. This will enable the potential buyer to survey various models before choosing one. It will also allow them to compare models and makes while gathering info from experts in the field.
